

UFOs in Military Formation Spotted Near International Space Station

A fleet of unidentified flying objects (UFOs) in military formation was filmed near the International Space Station (ISS). Scott C. Waring, a well-known ufologist, reports having observed this incredible sighting from videos streamed by NASA.

The date of the observation is set on May 6, 2022, and the location, nothing less than space itself. According to Waring, he spotted a fleet of approximately 31 flying discs traversing the live camera's field of view from the space station. The researcher, always on the lookout for evidence of extraterrestrial presence, took screenshots of this observation to scrutinize them closely.

Waring asserts that the captured images provide "100% proof" that extraterrestrials occupy Earth's orbit and move in massive groups. He insists that the images have undergone no retouching and urges skeptics to check the video link provided by NASA to confirm the authenticity of the observation.

The researcher also highlights the astonishing synchronization and apparent military formation of the UFOs, suggesting that they could be en route to confront a potential extraterrestrial threat. This theory, while speculative, fuels debates about the nature of extraterrestrial civilizations and their possible involvement in Earthly affairs.

The observation reported by Waring inevitably raises questions about the transparency of NASA and space agencies regarding unexplained phenomena observed in space. Some critics suggest that governments deliberately withhold information about aliens from the public, while others insist on the need for rigorous scientific investigation before drawing hasty conclusions.
